1. INTRODUCTION

This Determination and Guideline is intended to assist in creating a more flexible, diverse and inclusive South Australian public sector workforce, to generate productivity, increase workforce participation and improve on workforce culture. It is also intended that this Determination and Guideline will improve awareness and understanding of how to consistently implement flexible working arrangements in the South Australian public sector.

The Commissioner for Public Sector Employment is empowered to issue Guidelines relating to public sector employment matters pursuant to section 14(d) of the Public Sector Act 2009 (the PS Act). Under Schedule 1, the Commissioner may issue Determinations relating to leave and working arrangements:

- to enable public sector employees to move within the public sector, gain other work experience and undertake professional development;
- to assist public sector employees to balance work demands and family; and personal pursuits and responsibilities; and
- for other purposes.

The Commissioner may determine voluntary flexible working arrangements for public sector employees, including:

- part-time employment;
- flexible working hours;
- purchased leave; and
- compressed working weeks.

This Determination and Guideline is written with the following objects of the PS Act in mind:

- to ensure the public sector is viewed as an employer of choice;
- to make performance management and development a priority in the public sector;
- to promote uniformity and transparency in governance arrangements for the public sector; and
- to provide the framework for the State's Public Service and the effective and fair employment and management of public service and other public sector employees.

This Determination and Guideline is also intended to support the following public sector principles as set out in the PS Act:

- provide services with a high level of efficiency and effectiveness;
- treat public sector employees fairly, justly and reasonably;
- prevent unlawful discrimination against public sector employees or persons seeking employment in the public sector;
- encourage public sector employees to undertake professional development and to pursue opportunities throughout the public sector; and
- acknowledge employee successes and achievements and address under performance.

This Determination and Guideline is designed to complement Commissioner's Determination 3.1: Employment Conditions – Hours Of Work, Overtime And Leave, which outlines the leave and special leave with and without pay provisions applicable for those covered by the Determination.

2. IMPLEMENTING FLEXIBLE WORKING ARRANGEMENTS

South Australian public sector employees have access to a range of flexible working arrangements. All employees, including executives, have a right to request access to flexible working arrangements and agency support to utilise flexible working arrangements should not be limited to a minority of people based on their personal characteristics.

To effect a change to workplace culture so that flexible working arrangements are implemented more broadly throughout an agency, requests by individual employees should be accommodated wherever possible.

Chief Executives, Agency Heads and /or delegates should objectively consider each request by an employee to participate in flexible working arrangements against the impact on service delivery and organisational imperatives. Consideration must be given to whether alternative arrangements, such as job redesign, job share or technology aides, can be utilised to support the request.

Promoting and enabling access to flexible work practices provides an opportunity to consider the workforce requirements, service delivery models, and work practices that may be able to be adopted to be better position the agency in the future.

2.1 Determination

- Where a Chief Executive, Agency Head and /or delegate declines a request due to organisational imperatives, the decision maker must advise the applicant in writing within 21 days of the applicant's request including reasons for rejecting the request. Where a decision is not able to be made within 21 days, the Chief Executive, Agency Head and /or delegate should advise the applicant in writing of the cause of the delay, and the expected timeframe for a response.

In line with the Directions of the Premier: Flexibility for the Future, prior to advertising for any vacancy, serious and positive consideration must be given to whether, and if so, how the role can be redesigned to enable access to flexible working arrangements, including, but not limited to part time or job share. All positions must be advertised to include the following statement about the availability of workplace flexibility:

The South Australian public sector promotes diversity and flexible ways of working including part-time. Applicants are encouraged to discuss the flexible working arrangements for this role.

2.1 BENEFITS OF FLEXIBLE WORKING ARRANGEMENTS

Flexible work practices offer mutual benefits for public sector agencies and their employees. Embedding flexible work and flexible careers as standard business practice can assist to lift organisational performance, with improved outcomes at the organisational, individual and community level.

Flexible working arrangements and flexible workplaces enable more people to participate in the workforce, which assists diversity in the public sector. A culture which supports all employees to work flexibly without risking career progression removes barriers and enables an increased proportion of women to participate in leadership roles. Similarly, greater workforce participation of older South Australians, people with a disability and Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people is likely to be enhanced. Workplace diversity is positively linked with innovation, creativity and increased community/customer satisfaction.

Employees who have opportunities to work flexibly have been shown to have greater job satisfaction, this increases their productivity and reduces turnover and absenteeism. In addition it also benefits employee wellbeing. Flexible working arrangements supports the SA public sector principles to attract and retain high quality staff, and continue to be seen as a modern employer of choice.

2.2 FLEXIBLE WORKING ARRANGEMENTS AND PEOPLE WITH DISABILITY

Under the Equal Opportunity Act 1984(SA) and the Disability Discrimination Act 1992(Cth), agencies have a responsibility to make reasonable workplace adjustments that facilitate people with disabilities performing the inherent requirements of a job. Flexible working arrangements may assist a person with a disability to perform the inherent requirements of a job.

2.3 WORKPLACE CULTURE

Workplace culture is critical to the successful implementation and management of flexible working arrangements. Management should seek to integrate flexible working arrangements into workplace culture so that employees are comfortable in applying to use such arrangements and managers are equally comfortable in considering such applications.

When managers engage the team in the conversation, it provides the opportunity to address practical concerns and assist to create the cultural conditions which support flexible workplace arrangements become normalised.

Employees working in organisations where requests for flexible working arrangements are negotiated in a positive and supportive way are more likely to be productive, satisfied, and stay with the organisation over time.

2.4 REASONS FOR SEEKING FLEXIBLE WORKING ARRANGEMENTS

A range of personal circumstances can lead to an employee seeking flexible working arrangements to improve their work/life balance. These can include, but are not limited to:

- caring responsibilities for children, parents, partners or others;
- disabilities, including non-permanent conditions;
- participating in children's educational or extra-curricular activities (i.e. coaching school sports);
- participation in community and family events;
- domestic and family violence;
- general health and wellbeing;
- transition to retirement;
- study commitments; or
- pursuit of outside of work interests, e.g. volunteering.

When making an application to access flexible working arrangements, the employee does not need to outline the reason they are applying. Similarly, when considering applications, Chief Executives, Agency Heads and /or delegates should focus on whether the arrangements can be supported, not the reason for the application. This assists to remove any unconscious bias that may influence decision-making.

2.5 DECISION MAKING: ROLES, DUTIES, JOB DESIGN

It is important to analyse the roles and duties performed by individuals and teams, as well as the workflow of activities, to determine the suitability of these to different types of flexible working arrangements.

Relevant considerations may include:

- what duties have the potential to be performed within a flexible working arrangement?
- what duties may need to be redesigned or performed differently?
- how can duties be performed by individual employees or teams where people are participating in flexible working arrangements?
- how will flexible working arrangements for individuals enhance or affect overall service delivery?
- are there duties that can be restructured, redesigned or reallocated?
- are new roles required to support succession planning and work flow?
- are there times that all team members need to be physically in the same place (for example a team meeting) or can the need be addressed through technology (for example by telephone attendance)?
- are there any specific security, confidentiality, equipment, software or tools required to facilitate flexible working arrangements?; and
- how can knowledge be shared amongst employees to ensure continuity in service delivery?

2.6 PERFORMANCE MANAGEMENT

Chief Executives, agency heads and/or delegates are obliged to establish clear performance expectations for their employees and provide regular feedback, regardless of whether flexible work is in place. When implementing flexible work arrangements, particularly where the role is being redesigned or the workload is being adjusted to support part-time, it is appropriate to clarify the performance expectations with the employee.

Trust and open communication between managers and employees is essential to engendering a successful approach to flexible working arrangements in agencies.

2.7 TIMEFRAME AND REVIEW

Some flexible working arrangements, for example part-time employment or job sharing roles, can be implemented on an ongoing basis, however many of the other arrangements are temporary and should be reviewed at least annually to ensure they remain appropriate from an organisational and individual perspective.

At the end of any temporary arrangement the employee will return to their substantive employment conditions, unless another arrangement is negotiated. Where an employee or the Chief Executive, Agency Head and/or delegate wish to cease or vary the arrangement earlier than the agreed term, this needs to be negotiated between the parties.

3. OPTIONS

Flexible working arrangements can include any change to an employee's pattern, place or hours of work. Arrangements need to be considered alongside the applicable industrial provisions in the relevant Enterprise Agreement or Award. The options available include but are not limited to:

3.1 FLEXITIME

Flexitime enables employees to negotiate start and finish times, within a range of core business hours, without increasing or reducing the total number of hours worked when averaged over a four week cycle. Flexitime can assist employees to balance work and personal responsibilities. Flexitime can be accrued to enable employees to take a day or part day off, with agencies to specify minimum and maximum levels of flexitime that can be accrued, including in some circumstances that accrued hours lapse.

Determination

- Where shift work is approved within a flexitime arrangement, shift penalties are calculated on the actual time worked within a scheduled roster period. Therefore, no shift loading will be paid for the time worked in excess of the normal shift period for the purpose of accruing flexitime credits, or for the flexitime taken off during the normal shift period.
- Upon termination of employment or appointment to another position in the public sector or at the end of each flexitime accounting period, payment is not made for any credit time remaining. In addition, any debit time remaining at the cessation of duty will be deducted from the final salary payment due on termination of service.

3.2 PART-TIME

Employees work on a part-time basis when they work fewer hours than full-time arrangements. Hours are generally on a fixed and consistent basis. Salary is adjusted to reflect the actual hours worked. Different part-time options that might be implemented include:

- Working a set number of days in the week;
- Working a set number of hours a day;
- Staggered hours, creating different start and finish times for employees to allow for greatest coverage of staff during core business hours;
- Transition to retirement which may incorporate superannuation salary supplementation; and
- Progressively increasing working hours until full schedule of agreed hours is reached, for example when employees return from parental leave.

3.3 JOB SHARING

Job sharing is where a role is shared between two or more employees who work part time to cover the full time working hours. Job share provides flexibility for employees to choose their preferred work patterns to suit their lifestyles. Job share may be accommodated by separately allocating tasks and responsibilities; by sharing of all tasks and responsibilities with no division of duties over different days; or a combination of these.

3.4 COMPRESSED WEEKS

An employee elects to work a set number of hours over fewer days, in order to have a regular day off. Compressed week arrangements can be established on a weekly, fortnightly or monthly basis. Different compressed week options that might be implemented include:

- working weekly full time hours over a shorter time period;
- a weekday-weekend swap, where employees are able to swap a weekday working day for working on a weekend;
- weeks on, weeks off: working one or several weeks and then taking one or several weeks off; and
- annualised hours - agreed number of hours are worked on an annual rather than a weekly basis.

Determination

- Work Health and Safety issues need to be considered in respect of employees who are/could be working in an isolated situation and/or late at night as well as the number of hours an employee can work in any one day or week;
- if employees are required to work on their usual day off, the hours worked are not to be treated as overtime. In this situation the time worked must be taken off at a mutually convenient time; and
- compressed hours may be worked in any shift work situation that has been approved by the appropriate delegate. Shift penalties are calculated on the basis of actual ordinary time worked.

3.5 PURCHASED LEAVE

An employee reduces the rate of their salary in return for additional periods of leave over a specified period of time. The additional periods of leave are referred to as purchased leave. The periods of purchased leave are planned in advance and funded by salary reductions spread evenly over a service year. Examples of how purchased leave arrangements might operate include:

- working during the school terms and then taking time off during the school holidays;
- annual purchased leave: employee exchanges an agreed reduction in salary for extra periods of leave from 1-4 weeks in a 12 month period; and
- a five year plan: an employee sacrifices some pay every fortnight for 4 years and then takes the fifth year off with pay.

Determination

- purchased leave is to be treated as leave without pay;
- any period greater than one month of leave without pay in any service year will not be counted as service for accruing long service leave, recreation leave and sick leave entitlements;
- recreation leave loading is paid at the full award/agreement rate – not the reduced fractional rate and does not apply to extra leave in purchased leave;
- purchased leave cannot be taken to break a period of long service leave;
- retrospectivity does not apply.

3.6 WORKING FROM HOME

An employee performs their duties from a place that is different to their usual office location, for a portion of their usual hours, or on an ad hoc basis. Arrangements should be made so that employees are contactable via email and phone. Factors that need to be taken into consideration when setting up such an arrangement are:

- how the employee will access emails, electronic files and make/receive telephone calls;
- how the employee interrelates with other team members and colleagues;
- managing expectations as to how and when the employee will be accessible;
- work health and safety risks of the alternate work location; and
- work that can be performed outside of the usual office location including, but not limited to, confidentiality of information.

Determination

- Work Health and Safety issues for any proposed working from home arrangement must be addressed prior to the approval of any proposal;
- overtime is not available unless prior approval is given by a Chief Executive/agency head or delegate;
- entitlements to public holidays are unaffected by a working from home arrangement; and
- working from home may be used for any shift work situation that has been approved by a Chief Executive/agency head or delegate

3.7 WORKING REMOTELY

An employee performs their role from a different place to their colleagues for the full portion of their hours. This could include a workstation in a different office e.g. in a regional centre.
